Changes to FMMO Pricing and Trade Outlook

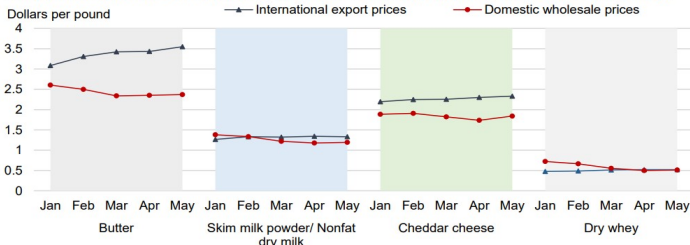

Some significant changes to the pricing under the Federal Milk Marketing Orders (FMMOs) are effective as of June. Key changes include higher manufacturing or make allowances, the removal of 500-pound barrel cheese from pricing surveys, revised Class I differentials, and the calculation of the base skim milk price for Class I as the higher of the advanced Class III or Class IV skim milk pricing factors. Other changes to FMMO formulations that increase the skim milk composition factors used in Class III and Class IV milk price calculations will not take effect until December 2025.

All wholesale dairy product prices reported in the USDA National Dairy Products Sales Report (NDPSR) increased from the week ending May 31 to the week ending June 7. The prices for 40-pound blocks of Cheddar increased by 5.18 cents per lb. The prices for butter, nonfat dry milk (NDM), and dry whey increased by 5.66, 2.40, and 1.61 cents per lb., respectively.

For the trading week ending June 13, at the Chicago Mercantile Exchange (CME) the weekly average spot prices for Cheddar cheese 500-pound barrels and 40-pound blocks were $1.8520 and $1.8595 per lb., respectively. CME spot prices for NDM, butter, and dry whey averaged $1.2655, $2.5400, and $0.5640 per lb., respectively.

Year-to-date, domestic wholesale prices for butter and Cheddar cheese have been internationally competitive and have maintained a large differential relative to international export prices as reported by USDA, AMS, Dairy Market News. The U.S. nonfat dry milk price was below the Oceania skim milk powder export price in May, but the difference narrowed from April. While the domestic dry whey price has been above the Western Europe dry whey export price, the price gap narrowed considerably in recent months. Lower-than-expected growth in milk production in Europe and high demand for Oceania's dairy products likely supported the current level of international prices. These trends might continue in the near term as New Zealand enters the winter season with direct impacts on pasture quality.

Demand for U.S Butter Rises

The year-over-year changes in U.S. dairy exports were mixed in April 2025. On a milk-fat equivalent basis, dairy exports increased to 1,312 million pounds, up 280 million pounds from April 2024. On a skim-solids milk-equivalent basis, exports decreased to 3,774 million pounds, down 379 million pounds from April 2024. With robust international demand and competitive prices, cheese and butter exports continue to increase on a year-over-year basis. While U.S. cheese exports to Mexico were only marginally higher year over year, more shipments were sent to Japan and Australia. Conversely, shipments of dry skim milk products and dry whey products declined due to weaker international demand for these products, especially from our Southeast Asian trading partners.

Dairy imports declined in April relative to April 2024. On a milk-fat basis, they totaled 644 million pounds, down 107 million pounds from April 2024. On a skim-solids basis, April dairy imports totaled 618 million pounds, down 6 million pounds from April 2024.

Although domestic use in April was higher year over year, year-to-date domestic use on a milk-fat basis was about 1.0% lower year-over-year. On a skim-solids basis, for the same period, domestic use was about 1.4% higher than the previous year. Over these 4 months, domestic use for butter, dry skim milk products, whey protein concentrate products, and lactose was higher year over year, while domestic use for cheese and whey was year-over-year lower. Of note, year-to-date domestic use of butter is about 7.2% higher year over year. This increase, together with a more than doubling of butter exports, was supported by a 3.9% increase in production.
